

The museum serves as a primary historical resource on the legacy of Sequoyah as a history of Cherokee homelands in his lifetime. They are rooted in Tennessee, and tied directly to Sequoyah – his achievements with the Cherokees and humankind as a whole.

The museum tells the story of the Cherokees and their impact on the evolution of our country. The museum is tied to the local history of our area and provides not only high-quality museum displays, but also geographical artifacts from another time that are essential to telling the story of Sequoyah and the Cherokees.

Join us for a reception to be immediately followed by a guided tour of the museum and grounds.
