Tickets go on sale Monday, May 2

Stories My Grandmother Told Me, written by Ted Swindley (Always, Patsy Cline) is a modern Southern gothic play, both funny and touching, about the relationship between the family matriarch and her older grandson, and the profound--and sometimes confusing--influence she has had on his life.

Told through the memories of John Mark, both as a younger and older man, the play weaves a tale of legacy and the history that Grandmother has entrusted to him.

Stories My Grandmother Told Me is directed by Sauni Rinehart and will be presented as a staged reading in a black box set. The audience will be drawn in by the voices and expressions of the very talented ensemble cast, which includes Freddi Birdwell (Grandmother), Alex Dufty (Older John Mark), Cameron Cleveland (Younger John Mark), Bailey Dufty (Man), and Brittany McCuiston (Woman). This unique presentation will delight audiences as they may recall stories their own grandmother (or grandfather) told them.
